Former West Bethel mill employees are hurt and angry

• Feel old and new managements misled them

By ALISON ALOISIO

Reg Westleigh had worked for Newton & Tebbets, Inc. for 38 years. When that came to an end two weeks ago it was like a death in the family, his wife Linda said.

Westleigh was one of many employees at the West Bethel mill who have lost their jobs since the business was sold in May.

Being unemployed is tough enough, but Westleigh and a number of other workers aren't happy with the way they said they were treated by the companies involved.

Newton & Tebbets owner Roy Newton sold the company and its name to Excel Dowel and Wood Products of Chicago, and sold the building and equipment to J.A. Thurston Co. of Rumford.

Some of the 25 to 30 employees were terminated shortly after the deal was closed on May 14.

Others continued on for a while, but then received pay cuts or were terminated.

That, said some, was a direct contradiction to what they were told by Thurston owners John and David Thurston in a May 15 meeting.

"We were told our jobs, wages and benefits would stay the same -- there would be no change," said former secretary Beverly Bennett.

But after about a month, she said, her pay was cut in half. "Unemployment was more (than what she was then paid)," Bennett said. She decided to look elsewhere for a job.

Two weeks ago, planer operator Clyde Crockett, who had been with the company 21 years, said he was told he would have to take a $2/hour pay cut. Crockett left rather than accept it.

Machinist Tom Gibbs, a 25-year veteran, was laid off at the same time.

When it came to Westleigh, who was told he would be getting more than a $3/hour cut, his decision was the same as Crockett's.

"When I saw what they did to Tom and Clyde, I said 'I'm walking.' I'm not putting up with it any more," he said.

The former employees also objected to the way they found out the company had been sold. "We had to read about the sale in the paper (The Citizen, May 15)," said Westleigh.

During the employee meeting the same day, the Thurstons denied the newspaper account of the terms of the deal, according to the workers.

Thurstons' view

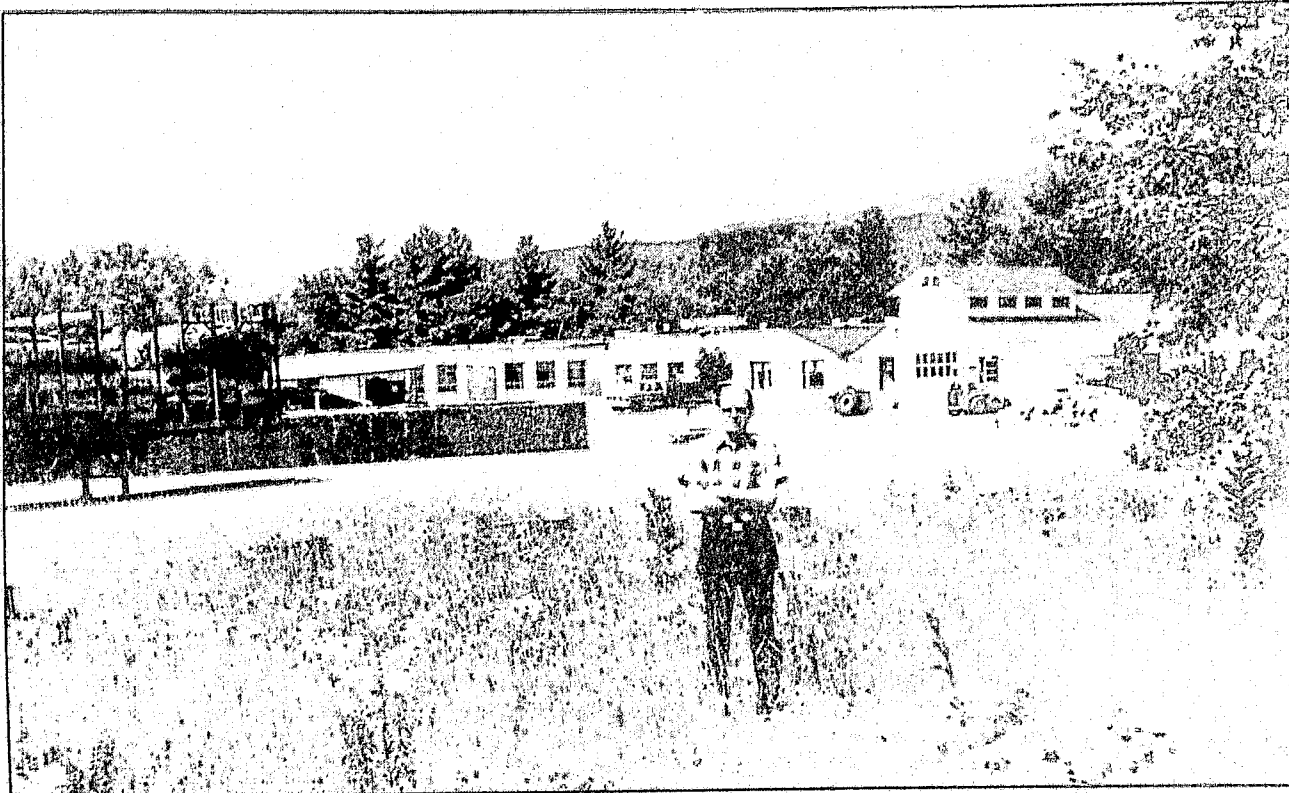

David Thurston said last week his company never had the chance to announce the deal, because it was not closed until about 6 p.m. on May 14.

"We got blasted by the employees. I said nothing in the paper was necessarily true. I felt it should not have been in the paper," he said.

John Thurston had been contacted by The Citizen during the day on the 14th, and said last week the article was generally correct. He said he did not remember if he had asked for his comments to be off the record.

As for misleading the employees at the meeting regarding their jobs, John Thurston said, "We told them

Post office decision soon?

• Planners OK Merrill's site in Bethel Station

By MICHAEL DANIELS

The Bethel Planning Board last week approved a new post office building in the Bethel Station development -- but that does not mean the town's next post office will be located there.

The United States Postal Service has twice postponed deadlines for a decision on where the new post office will be located.

The Bethel Station site was the first choice of the USPS following the first round of proposals, in May.

But bowing to the wishes of the town selectmen, the USPS agreed wait for a proposal on renovating or rebuilding on the site of the current Main Street post office. That property is scheduled to go to foreclosure auction on Aug. 16.

The USPS, however, wants to make a decision soon, and the agency is still looking favorably on the Bethel Station site.

Terry Brooks, a USPS real estate specialist, said a number of people in town have contacted him to express concern about the parking situation at the Main Street site.

That concern, Brooks said, coupled with the Planning Board approval of the Bethel Station site, were strong factors in its favor.

"When you start putting things together, the original decision looks good," he said.

Brooks has requested another meeting with town selectmen, to review what progress they have made on the Main Street site.

He stressed that the USPS has not ruled out the Main Street site, "but we have bent over backwards," he said, to accommodate the selectmen's concerns.

Now, Brooks said, "We've got to do something and do it soon."

Pipeline archeologists finding signs of early life

• A dozen prehistoric or historic sites have been identified nearby

By ALISON ALOISIO

All of their victories are temporary, while their losses are permanent.

Small wonder John Cross, Tim Barker and their crew of 15 are probing archaeological sites they are finding along the Portland Natural Gas pipeline.

Cross and crew are part of a large-scale environmental survey along the route of a proposed new 240-mile pipeline stretching from Portland to Quebec, scheduled to be built in 1998.

Their job is to locate both prehistoric Indian sites and historic sites, reporting on and gathering artifacts prior to construction. The work is done in cooperation with the Maine Historic Preservation Commission.

The archeologists have been in the Bethel area for a few weeks, checking sites where people may have lived thousands of years ago.

Some of Bethel, for instance, was a glacial lake about 11,000 years ago -- making for the possibility of human occupation along the former shoreline.

"We also look for sites with proximity to current fresh water and good drainage, such as wetlands," said Barker, an archeologist from the University of Massachusetts at Amherst.

Those areas, he said, would have provided ideal locations for hunters to watch for game and waterfowl.

Last week, the crew had barely arrived at a likely site when one archeologist found a biface (an arrowhead) lying on the surface of the ground.

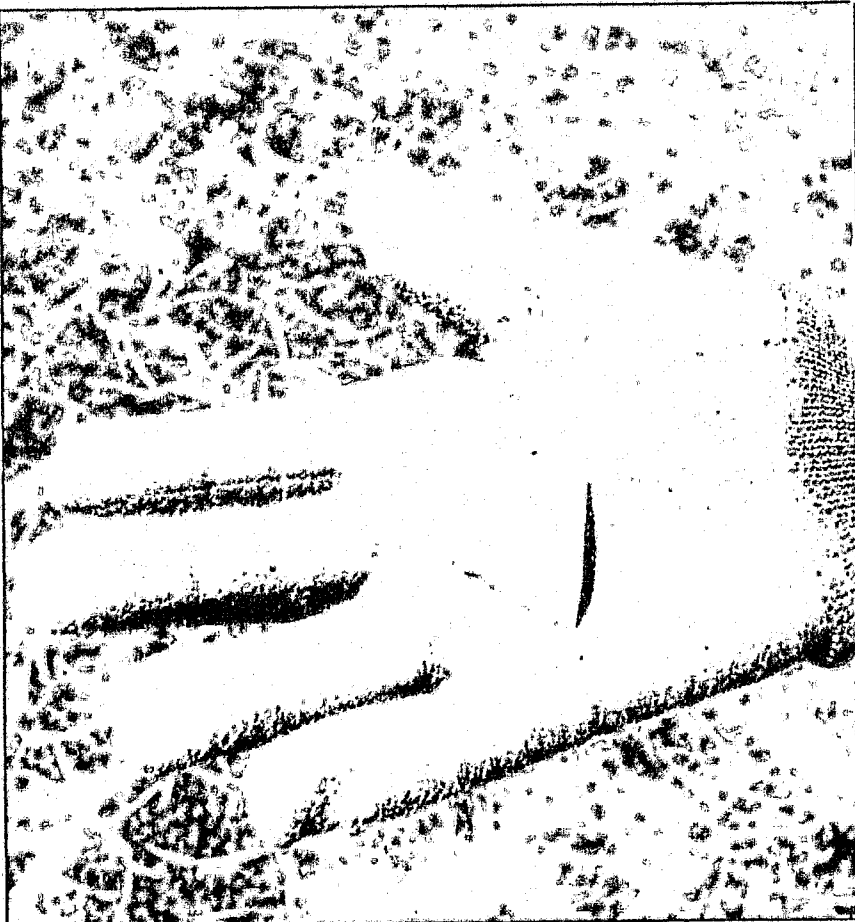

But that's not the way it usually works. They often go for long periods doing plenty of digging without any artifacts to show for it. A promising area is checked at regular intervals, with the soil carefully sifted through screens to ensure the smallest pieces aren't overlooked.

"We mainly look for prehistoric chipping debris from stone tool manufacture," said Barker.

Other artifacts can include knives, broken bits of pottery, and stones used to ring a fireplace. Charcoal, when found, can be subjected to Carbon-14 dating and its age pinpointed within a couple of hundred years.

The archeologists also look for

Town blamed for Newry shoreland SNAFU

By ALISON ALOISIO

Lawyer Kim Visbaras called it one of the most classic cases he has seen of a town "leading a landowner down a path until the 11th hour."

Visbaras is the attorney for David and Pauline Ouelette, who last week asked the Newry Appeals Board for a variance that would allow them to build a house on their Bear River lot.

The variance was tentatively rejected by a tie (2-2) vote. But the couple may yet get approval, pending a measurement of their shore frontage.

The Planning Board had earlier ruled the lot is not buildable, because it should be combined with an adjacent lot, also owned by the couple.

ATTABOY, OFFICER #@%#@

To the Editor:

Not too long ago, some young people decided that it would be a fun thing to do to tear down all of the American flags from Main Street and stick them face down in the dirt.

I don't think it is needed at this time for me to voice my feelings about this, because they are well known. I love the flag and everything it stands for, and can make no excuse for those who would do such a thing.

The purpose of this letter is of a different matter.

We are so quick these days to be critical of police in this society of ours, but we so rarely take the time to give them credit when credit is due.

Officer Allen, or Bethel Three, or that no good #@%#@ Allen, as some people affectionately call him, decided that this was something that needed the attention of good police work, and that is exactly what he brought to bear on this case.

He not only solved this case, but another case of vandalism that was still on the books.

He saw his duty and he did it, thus making a lot of people in Bethel who feel the same way about the flag as I do feel a lot better.

Attaboy Officer Allen, you no good #@%#@.

SIGNS PHOTO WAS SLANTED

To the Editor:

Over the years you have let your bias and prejudices show through numerous times in your editorials and in the headlines and pictures. However, never has this been more obvious than in your choice of pictures for MDOT signs that you used to go along with the summary of the Bethel special Town Meeting and the outcome of the vote on the Directional Sign Ordinance.

Attaboy, you did mention that the signs pictured are in an area under construction you could have chosen any one of a number of different sets of MDOT signs which are in decent shape. This once again shows that the last of this paper never met an ordinance he didn't like, with the possible exception of one the town of Bethel proposed a few years back which would have regulated dogs. This ordinance would have affected your dignity because I believe you do or did own dogs at the time.

It would be nice to have one of your news stories if you at least made an attempt to be objective.

FISH AND GAME ASSOC. OPPOSES REFERENDUM

To the Editor:

The members of the Mt. Abram Fish and Game Association strongly oppose the Green Party's forestry ban referendum.

Our working forests in the unorganized townships are admired and enjoyed by many. These forests are the product of management practices that the Green Party's referendum would ban.

Maine already has a Forest Practices Act. We should continue to work with this through the normal legislative process and vote a resounding "no" to the Green Party's Forestry Ban Referendum.

The state's cracked fish and wildlife habitat, and the increase in outdoor recreational opportunities, are the result of existing good forestry and good conservation being done by our private forest landowners. Things do not have to be changed.

Our state economy would be severely damaged by the Green Party's Forestry Ban Referendum. Yes, even our immediate area hundreds of jobs would be lost.

The Green Party does not plan to stop with this one proposal. Their motives lead to taking most of Maine's privately owned working forests away from the people of Maine.

Please join us in voting NO to this drastic Green Party proposal on Nov. 5.

Richard Carter
President, Mt. Abram Fish and Game Assoc.

The Green Gabled Trees of Maine

By MIKE BROWN

This whole media buzz about the Green Party forestry practices referendum, an alternative competing measure devised by a nervous Nellie Gov. King, and a special session of the Maine Legislature in September, can be simmered down to one word: senseless.

That is: A national conspiracy by corporate environmentalists such as the nationwide Green parties and their 25 member coalition of groups such as the Sierra Club with the selfsame purpose of a land grab of some ten million acres of private property in the State of Maine.

When the Greens so called clearcutting initiated referendum became a reality and the first polling indicated it would pass in an eye blink, it became an instant accelerant for a political bonfire.

The Republicans quickly damned it but the Democrats refused to insert any opposition in their convention platform this summer. Now that public sentiment has swung dramatically against the referendum (no doubt with a ton of money thrown into a public relations campaign against it) Gov. King and the Democrats are caught between the proverbial rock and a hard place.

King is covering his no-party political base by structuring a mixed committee format, moving them in and out like chessmen, so that whatever comes down he's off to re-election without a fanny full of woody political toothpicks.

The Democrats are trying to save face from their less than courageous dormancy on the referendum by suddenly pole vaulting up to the media bar hoping for a qualification in people standings.

The hypocrisy is incredulous. Last week, four D-legislators, Representatives Dick Gould and Paul Jacques, and Senators Susan Longley and Spike Carey, e-mailed a working group position paper to the Bangor Daily News which was followed in two days by a personal meeting with BDN editorial staff.

The newspaper ran the foursome's piece on its op-ed page. Attempts to reach Sens. Longley and Carey to explain their party's hypocrisy were unsuccessful. They both did not return calls left on their answering machines. One question would have been if the bylined foursome was writing under the auspices of the Maine Democratic Party and its changed position on the Green Party referendum, or were they opportunistic, self-serving political free-lancers?

Sen. Longley is a consistent voting liberal but has in her backyard, Robbins Lumber, a large Maine forestry company. Rep. Gould is a small woodlot owner.

The issue of a special session may be decided by the Maine Supreme Court which has a couple of thorny questions before it on whether a public initiated referendum can be spiked, grafted or left alone as a widow maker to fall wherever in the forest.

If the law court gives the governor an inch, he will take a political mile and call the special session and let the legislature take the heat for whichever way the woods road turns.

The Republicans don't want a special session pragmatically believing that the referendum hasn't a chance of passing, and neither does it have legs in a special session. So why, ask the Republicans, should King call an open-ended special session that may cost a hundred grand before the lawmakers exit from their $170 a day State House summer junkie?

The Republican position was given in a face to face meeting with King last week. Will they cave in?

Also, who will control the Legislature once it convenes? Not the governor who has no say over the two legislative bodies. And what special legislation for special interests might come up besides King's hasty alternative to clear cutting? Already there is some funny money surplus accruing and grabby hands will be all out to lift it from taxpayer pocketbooks.

And that brings us back to the land grab. Do most of Maine citizens really believe that Maine's private ownership forestry land of some 7.7 million centuries-held acres by 15 of Maine's largest common stock-holder landowners are threatened and critically need drastic public management? The whole issue of the referendum, as defined by its common designation clear cutting is just alarmist rhetoric acerbated by political hyperbole and weed strewn hypocrisy.

For it they do things in a green tree, what shall be done in the dry?

All members and friends of the Bethel Historical Society are reminded that the next monthly meeting will be held on Thursday, Aug. 1 at the West Parish Congregational Church at 7:30 p.m. This meeting will be the society's official recognition of the bicentennial of the founding of Congregationalism in what is today Bethel.

Speaker for the evening will be Margaret Joy Tibbitts, who along with Sumner Burgess, has compiled a history of this denomination from 1796 to the present. Anyone interested in attending this meeting is cordially invited to do so. Copies of the new history will be for sale. In preparation for the annual meeting on Sept. 5, two members will be selected from the general membership to join a trustee representative to complete the nominating committee, which will report a slate of officers and new trustees for the new society year. This meeting is another in the continuing series during 1996 honoring the history of Bethel in its bicentennial year.

Water district to hold special meeting

ANDOVER--Andover Water District directors have scheduled an informational meeting next week to discuss whether an article regarding the town's fire hydrants should be taken off the Aug. 13 special Town Meeting warrant. Selectmen and Fire Chief Ken Dixon will also be at the meeting, according to director Anne Glazier. The selectmen have been discussing the feasibility of withdrawing from the district and finding a more efficient -- and possibly cheaper -- source of water for the hydrants. The district would lose about $19,000 in fees now paid by the town, Glazier said, if the town pulls out.

VW sign/trailer tribulations continue

BETHEL--The Planning Board and Frank Whittier reached an apparent compromise last week on the half a Volkswagen bus Whittier had attached to his snow board business in Mountain View Mall. The planners agreed that if Whittier attached a tongue to the bus and detached it from the building, then they would consider it to be a trailer (as Whittier had argued) and not a sign -- and it would not be in violation of Bethel's Sign Ordinance. Whittier agreed to the arrangement, but the bus's regulatory journey is not yet over. To shore up his case that it was a trailer, not a sign, Whittier had registered the bus as a trailer with the state Registry of Motor Vehicles. Bethel Police Chief Dale Bellman said he is now investigating whether charges should be filed against Whittier for falsifying the registration -- since the bus was attached to the building when the application was filled out.

Bike trek breaks record

AUGUSTA--The Trek Across Maine -- Sunday River to the Sea bicycling event, held last month, set a record for participation and funds raised. The ride is sponsored by the American Lung Association of Maine. There were 1,150 riders, 207 volunteers, and $613,000 in total money raised, making the event the largest Lung Association bicycle ride in the country. Cyclists ranged in age from 6 to 77.

Gourmet compost for sale

PORTLAND--With a name like Penobscot Blend, it sounds like a hip new coffee concoction from a gourmet roaster. Read the ingredients -- Atlantic salmon, Maine mussels and blueberries -- and it could be dinner ... if you like dirt. "People always ask me 'Uh, am I supposed to eat this?'" said Carlos Quijano, who came up with the idea for the gourmet compost and now heads the company that sells it. Penobscot Blend, which comes in a "designer bag" with a painting of coastal Maine, is being snatched up by New England gardeners who want to give their plants a good meal, while thinking pleasant thoughts about Maine. The mix is 25 percent wild blueberries, 25 percent salmon, 25 percent mussels and 25 percent peat. Using the waste from those industries encourages them to compost their leftover material, and has created jobs in Washington County.

CMP cutting criticized

GRAY--Central Maine Power Co.'s tree cutting practices are under fire after a couple came home one day to find the trees in front of their house gone. A company hired by CMP to maintain its power lines had cleared the trees and undergrowth beneath the lines in front of Al and Brenda Lamanda's house to reduce the likelihood of power outages for years to come. But the Lamandas, and some neighbors, want the utility to replace their trees. Gray's code enforcement officer has ordered the tree cutting to stop, but not because of the aesthetics. Gray's shoreland zoning prohibits cutting any trees more than four inches in diameter within 250 feet of a lake, without the town's permission. CMP says it generally has the right to maintain its power lines, wherever they are. Spokesman Mark Ishkanian said CMP was unaware it was violating any shoreland zoning restriction when it had the trees cut July 1 by Lucas Tree Experts. The utility has stopped clearing in the area and will apply to the Planning Board for permission to maintain its lines near the lake, Carter said. If permission is granted, the town is unlikely to pursue the shoreland zoning violation, she said, though she has suggested that the utility replace some of the trees.

Scary workshop planned

ORONO--The horrors of censorship are on the agenda at a University of Maine conference on reading the work of Stephen King. Workshops and presentations at the Oct. 11-12 "Reading Stephen King" conference include a look at the place of King's work and other popular literature in the classroom and the issue of student choice. King, a Maine alumnus who lives in Bangor, will speak at the opening banquet dinner. But workshops and presentations will be led by scholars and students from across the country. High school students will participate in sessions on student choice. And there will be youth activities, including discussions and movies, for King fans ages 12 and older. Some educators consider King's popular horror books a good way to get "reluctant readers" interested in books. But some school boards have banned his books from required reading lists.

Companies launch space-age eyewear

NEW YORK--Some modern eyewear has a memory. Now, if you can only remember where you put your glasses, Marchon Eyewear Inc. has Flexon frames, made of a metal wire that is nearly as flexible as rubber. And Alain Mikli is introducing Stark Eyes, sunglasses with fully articulated earpieces. Both represent industry efforts to keep eyewear from getting bent out of shape, but there is still no failsafe ways to prevent loss. Flexon frames are made of a nickel-titanium alloy with a "metal memory." The alloy, developed by the military more than 30 years ago, was used in heat shields for space shuttles and couplers for hydraulic lines on F14 fighter planes. The frames, which, in effect, revert to their original fit even after abuse, range in price from $170 to $220. The news in Alain Mikli's innovative eyewear is in the way the earpieces connect to the frame. Rather than a traditional screw hinge, there's a twisted composite fiber that creates a "biomechanical articulation designed like a human micro-clavicle." In other words, the earpiece has the same mobility as an arm has at the shoulder. The eyewear will retail for about $300.

Company developing lobster burgers

BANGOR--Lobster shells and scraps of meat that usually end up in the garbage heap will be turned into useful products that could include lobster burgers, if a Down East company's recycling project is a success. Carver Shellfish Inc. of Beals Island is already selling a line of quick-frozen lobster tails and claws. Now, it's developing a process to turn every scrap of the crustacean into something useful. Essential to the project is a machine adapted from the poultry industry that separates lobster waste into two components: meat paste and ground powder of shell and fiber. The recovered paste can be used as a base for soups, sauces, salad dressings, stuffings -- and perhaps even lobster burgers. The shells and fiber have been found to be useful as a nutrient-rich additive to fertilizer and feed for the salmon aquaculture industry.

N.E. earthquake could cause damage

BOSTON, Mass.--Here in New England, the ground may seem firm and quiet beneath our feet, with none of the rumblings and groanings that people in California have to endure. But appearances can be deceiving, says John Ebel, director of Boston College's Weston Observatory and a professor of geophysics. He said while scientists believe major earthquakes hit New England only once every 5,000 to 11,000 years, smaller ones that can cause property damage recur as often as 60 to 94 years. The last earthquake that caused damage in Boston came in 1755. Chimneys collapsed and objects were thrown off shelves. Ebel and other scientists are concerned, however, about modern-day Boston, which has large areas of filled land. That type of land can "amplify the ground shaking," he said. Scientists also are concerned because Boston has many older unreinforced brick buildings, which are vulnerable in earthquakes.

On Sunday, Aug. 18 from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. there will be a House and Garden Tour of 14 different historic homes and public buildings in Bethel. Locations have been selected to provide examples of architectural styles through the eras.

The homes and gardens will be open, rain or shine, for a one-time charge of $10. Tickets may be purchased at the Moses Mason House from 1 to 4 p.m. Tuesdays through Sundays, or by calling Dr. Stanley Howe at 824-2291 or Janet Black at 836-2412. Tickets may also be purchased the day of the tour at the Moses Mason House.

Patrons will drive to several parts of the town, including Bethel Hill, East Bethel, Mayville and West Bethel, and will be able to see homes owned by original townspeople, early 19th century U.S. congressmen, and original religious structures. Also of interest are "time lines" in some of the homes showing bits and pieces of the remodeling progression and additions through time.

This collection of historic buildings promises to give an outstanding display of the involvement of our community.

FROM THE

Bethel Town Office

You may remember, a couple of weeks back, the article about recycling. The following is the exciting conclusion.

All colors of glass are being collected at the center, usually only clear and brown are accepted. This is out of the ordinary and expect this to change in the future. Our recycling headquarters in Norway will use the crushed glass as clean fill for the upcoming expansion. This is an excellent example that the reuse of a material is probably the most efficient.

Let us talk about mixed paper. Mixed takes all of the single layer cardboard, pizza boxes, egg cartons, manila folders, gift wrap, post and greeting cards. Milk, juice and drink boxes are okay also. All containers which held food must be washed out. Please allow them to dry and all boxes should be flat. Do not include tissue, napkins, paper cups or plates.

Plastic is #2 only. There should be an imprint of a "2" in a triangle on the bottom. Many #2 containers are not accepted. No motor oil bottles, tub style or yogurt containers. Do not recycle the clear, glossy bottles that peanut butter and cooking oils come in. All caps and rings must be removed. Rinse containers clean. Labels may be left on. Plastic bags are not recyclable.

Aluminum and tin have the same rules as each other, but are collected separately. Clean, crush and remove labels. Use a magnet to tell tin from aluminum. The tin will stick. Do not include paint or aerosol cans.

Office/computer paper is white or light colored paper. Envelopes without windows are accepted in this category. Deposit it loose. This material is always in demand. In reviewing the tons recycled to date, it seems that Bethel generates more office paper than is being reported. This would lead one to believe that extra effort would prove worthy.

Every effort to recycle will prove worthy. The membership dues are lowest in the history of the corporation. It stands to reason that this is where a big push to recycle would greatly offset the cost of disposal this year. If you are taking the time to recycle, please make an extra effort to get it 100 percent correct. Bethel's recycling center is open 24 hours a day and is located behind the school bus garage. At the Town Office there are flyers, "Recycling at a Glance," free for the taking. Thanks for your attention.

From the Bethel Police log:

Drivers trade places, to no avail

On July 25 at 11:45 p.m. a vehicle passed the police cruiser on the Route 2 bridge at a high rate of speed -- 53 m.p.h. in a 35 m.p.h. zone. It then exited Bridge Street onto Railroad Street, and entered the Bethel Area Health Center parking lot. The driver switched seats with the middle passenger, and the vehicle went back into motion, then stopped again. The first operator, Daniel R. Lamontagne, 30, was charged with operating after suspension, habitual offender, OUI and speeding. The second operator, Judy Lamontagne, 28, was charged with OUI. Both were transported to the Oxford County Sheriff's office.

Saturday, July 28

At 4:25 a.m. a Railroad Street resident reported a male subject lying the side of the road on Mechanic Street. Police asked that Bethel Rescue be toned. When the officer arrived, Bethel Rescue had checked the area and found no one. The officer spoke to a man in the Big Apple who had talked to the subject. He said the man was intoxicated.

At 10:10 p.m. police stopped a vehicle on Route 26 for defective lights. The officer saw a 12-pack of beer in the rear seat under the feet of a passenger, who said it was his. The 18-year-old driver was summonsed for illegal transportation of alcohol. The beer was retained by the officer as evidence. The subject was issued a written warning for the motor vehicle defect. All subjects were released, as none of the undamaged subjects had consumed alcohol.

At 11:47 p.m. a Main Street resident reported he had nearly struck two very small fawns standing in the roadway on the Route 2 overpass. He said he herded them into the boggy area between Route 2 and Railroad Street. The officer checked later, and they were still there. There was no sign of the mother. The officer notified the warden service.

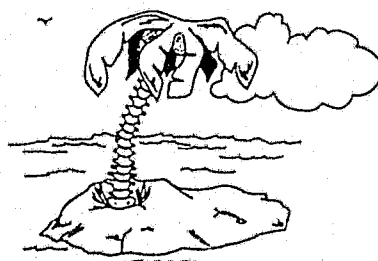

Sunday, July 29

At 12:02 p.m. a Railroad Street resident reported there were several subjects sitting outside the Big Apple store bothering customers as they entered the parking lot. Police spoke to the subjects, who said their vehicle had had broken down and they had sent a Western Union to receive money to repair the vehicle. They said it was parked in Waterford. The officer told them he did not want any more problems with them or he would have to go a step further and arrest them.

This report highlights points of interest from the Bethel Police Department log, but does not include all reports of police activity.

When the officer arrived, Bethel Rescue had checked the area and found no one. The officer spoke to a man in the Big Apple who had talked to the subject. He said the man was intoxicated.

At 10:10 p.m. police stopped a vehicle on Route 26 for defective lights. The officer saw a 12-pack of beer in the rear seat under the feet of a passenger, who said it was his. The 18-year-old driver was summoned for illegal transportation of alcohol. The beer was retained by the officer as evidence. The subject was issued a written warning for the motor vehicle defect. All subjects were released, as none of the undamaged subjects had consumed alcohol.

At 11:47 p.m. a Main Street resident reported he had nearly struck two very small fawns standing in the roadway on the Route 2 overpass. He said he herded them into the boggy area between Route 2 and Railroad Street. The officer checked later, and they were still there. There was no sign of the mother. The officer notified the warden service.

Sunday, July 29

At 12:02 p.m. a Railroad Street resident reported there were several subjects sitting outside the Big Apple store bothering customers as they entered the parking lot. Police spoke to the subjects, who said their vehicle had broken down and they had sent a Western Union to receive money to repair the vehicle. They said it was parked in Waterford. The officer told them he did not want any more problems with them or he would have to go a step further and arrest them.

This report highlights points of interest from the Bethel Police Department log, but does not include all reports of police activity.

'They had some wage inflation we found incredible. Some of them were being paid 50 percent higher than the next highest for the industry.'

JOHN THURSTON
Co-owner, J.A. Thurston that for the transition everything would be frozen, until we sorted and sifted through our personnel needs."

"We could only be vague at that point. We didn't even know where the light switches were," said David.

He said Newton's business had "nosedived" in the year preceding the purchase. "They had dropped 30 percent from their peak. It looked like they would shut down," he said.

John said another issue they faced was the rate of pay at Newton & Tebbets.

"They had some wage inflation we found incredible. Some of them were being paid 50 percent higher than the next highest for the industry," he said.

David said they checked with a larger, similar company -- Saunders Brothers of Westbrook -- and found the Newton employees were paid roughly 50 percent higher.

"You can't survive that way," he said.

The pay was also higher than at Thurston's Rumford plant, which would have created a morale problem, Thurston said.

Of the people left after the May terminations, he said, two have been laid off and two left on their own. (Several others had been laid off in April by Newton, as business slowed.)

There are currently about 30 employees at Newton & Tebbets, with some being shuffled back and forth to Rumford. The long-term plan is to employ eight to 10 in West Bethel, to run the sawmill only. The others will be offered work in Rumford, according to John Thurston.

"But I doubt if many take it, because of the distance (many live in New Hampshire)," he said.

Newton unfair?

Some of the terminated workers also felt they were misled and treated unfairly by Roy Newton in regards to their benefits.

"We had Blue Cross/Blue Shield insurance. We were led to believe it would keep going if we paid the full premium," said Linda Gibbs, who was terminated in May.

But, explained Bennett, "We then found out that because there was no longer a company, there was no health insurance policy."

Gibbs said Thurston's looked into other alternatives for the ex-employees, but the options were financially prohibitive for most.

Vacation days owed are also a sore spot. "We earned them in '96," said Gibbs. "But we were only given half because we worked half of '96."

Linda Westleigh contacted the state Bureau of Labor Standards about the benefits issues, but was told Newton & Tebbets had covered themselves legally.

Roy Newton, contacted through his attorney, did not wish to be interviewed.

Despite the hard feelings, several of Newton's ex-employees gave him a decent rating as an employer over the years.

"I was well satisfied," said Westleigh.

"He was always kind to me," said Sid Murphy, a 19-year employee.

Which may have made the end harder to take.

Said 34-year employee Edith Smith, "I feel like I had the legs kicked out from under me."

NO HARM DONE, EXCEPT TO THE CAR
A father and his two children escaped injury Monday when their car rolled over on Route 2 in Gilead. Mark Barash, 43, of Jamaica Plain, Mass. had stopped on the side of the road, then tried to back up. But the rear of the car got too close to a culvert and ditch, and flipped over onto the passenger side. All three occupants were wearing seat belts. The car sustained about $2,000 worth of damage. Here, Joshua and Tilla Barash look on as their dad and Geoff Gaudreau of Gaudreau's Repair ready the car to be pulled out of the ditch.

Shoreland SNAFU

dinance, revised in 1991, requires a minimum 200-foot frontage. The Ouellette's two lots, part of a 5-lot subdivision approved in 1989, are approximately 150 feet each. The ordinance requires they be combined to make one conforming lot.

The Ouellette's dropped an earlier request for an appeal on a third lot. They went to the board last Wednesday instead to ask for the variance.

In 1992, Visbaras said, the town had incorrectly issued building permits on three other subdivision lots that also should have been combined. One of them was the Ouellette's other 150-foot lot.

That, he said, gave the appearance to the Ouellette's it would also be acceptable to build separately on the lot in question.

The couple had also been given an incorrect copy of the town's shoreland zoning ordinance, leading to further confusion regarding the buildability of the lot.

Visbaras said the town's actions gave the Ouellette's the impression the lot was buildable "until the 11th hour," when they were told of the incorrect ordinance at a Planning Board meeting.

"A group of errors were made to lead the Ouellette's to believe both lots would stand alone," he said.

He also said it would create hardship for them if they could not build on the lot, or sell it as buildable.

Visbaras' arguments prompted Appeals Board member Owen Wright to vote for a variance. He was joined by Richard Clark.

Chairman David Schlieper opposed the variance, saying sufficient hardship -- a criteria for a variance -- had not been proven.

He also said the errors of the town "are irrelevant as far as the composition of the ordinance."

Board member Rockie Graham agreed. "I think there were a lot of mistakes, but you can't base an opinion on the fact people messed up in the past," she said.

Then, ironically, the Ouellette's appeared to get caught in their own lawyer's argument.

Visbaras had told the board earlier in the meeting the Ouellette's would be willing, if necessary, to redraw the boundaries of their third lot, also adjacent to the one in question, to produce two 200-foot lots. The third lot's frontage is over 200 feet.

He said if the shoreline is measured along the average high-water mark the total frontage might be sufficient.

That option, in Graham's mind, removed the hardship argument, and she voted against the variance.

But Graham also said she might reconsider her vote if the actual total lot frontage did not equal 400 feet. The board decided to have the frontage measured, and then meet again to finalize Graham's vote.

Matters of Interest

From Boston Unive

My husband and I have many precautions I should take.

There are a number of things I should do to improve her chance of survival.

First, she should be taken to a hospital as soon as possible for a full physical exam and evaluation of the woman's health.

Then, if possible, the Ouellette's should be given the opportunity to build separately on the lot in question.

The couple had also been given an incorrect copy of the town's shoreland zoning ordinance, leading to further confusion regarding the buildability of the lot.

SIFTING THE SANDS OF TIME—Archaeologist Dug North of Norwich, Vt. sifts sandy soil through a screen to check for small bits of artifacts on the route of the new gas pipeline.

historic evidence of human presence, such as ceramics, cut nails, bottle glass, cellar holes and stone foundations.

So far they've found about half a dozen each of historic and prehistoric sites.

The prehistoric period ended with the first contact Indians had with Europeans, in the 16th century.

Some of the prehistoric finds are identified with what is known as the Susquehanna tradition of about 4,000 to 3,500 years ago.

The archaeologists identify artifacts according to cultural traditions, or ways of life, rather than trying to associate them with a particular ethnic group.

"Some Native Americans are sensitive to their traditions. We'd rather not identify them to avoid possible misinformation," said Cross, who is the project archeologist.

When they find a site with evidence of human presence, they do a site examination to find how far it extends.

They may then excavate it. "We excavate in a way we can rebuild the site in the lab. Once it's lost to construction, it can never be replaced," said Barker.

It's a never-ending race to keep ahead of the modern human presence. "All our victories are temporary, while our losses end up being permanent," said Cross.

The archaeologists encourage area residents who may know of sites to contact them, so that any evidence can be correctly studied and preserved.

They may be reached through the Portland Gas office at 207-797-8002.

Matters of Health

From Boston University Medical Center

My husband and I are hoping to start a family next year. Are there any precautions I should be taking now to help ensure a healthy pregnancy?

There are a number of steps a woman can take before becoming pregnant to improve her chances of having a healthy pregnancy and a healthy baby.

First, she should see her doctor at least three months before conceiving. Doing so may seem excessive to those who have been making routine doctor visits for paychecks and breast exams, but such a visit is important. The doctor will alert a woman to the factors that can affect a pregnancy and evaluate the woman's health for carrying a child. Factors that may interfere with a healthy pregnancy include nutritional and lifestyle behaviors, infectious and chronic diseases, and exposures to certain chemicals and radiation. Women may want to consider selecting a primary care provider who will be on pregnancy preparation.

One particularly important step a woman should take in the months before becoming pregnant is to adjust her intake of certain vitamins, in consultation with her physician. For instance, she should begin taking supplements of folic acid, which can reduce the risk of neural muscular disorders, at least a month before she should also limit her intake of vitamin A, which, at very high levels, can cause birth defects. Since some women do not have the proper level of the vitamins in her system when she conceives.

If you wait eight weeks until your first prenatal visit to begin taking folic acid," says Susanna Walsh, MD, an obstetrician-gynecologist at Boston University Medical Center, "a neural muscular defect could already have occurred."

Likewise, women considering pregnancy should have a physical, so that their doctor can determine if they have any conditions that, without treatment, could affect their pregnancy. Studies have shown that women infected with HIV who take the drug AZT can dramatically decrease the risk of transmitting the virus to their unborn children. And, by receiving the necessary inoculations, prospective mothers may eliminate altogether their risk of contracting some infectious diseases during pregnancy -- such as measles, mumps, rubella (German measles), hepatitis and chicken pox -- which could endanger both themselves and their unborn children. In addition, a doctor can determine if a woman is at risk for any conditions, such as high blood sugar levels (diabetes), pulmonary disease or cardiac disease, that, untreated, could threaten her own health, or that of her child, during pregnancy.

There are numerous well-known negative influences, such as a poor diet, smoking, heavy lifting and chemical and radiation exposure, that can affect pregnancy. There are also less obvious factors. For example, to avoid the risk of neural muscular disorders, women who suspect they may be pregnant should avoid hot tubs, whirlpools and saunas. And, if they change a cat litter box during pregnancy, women should use gloves and wash their hands afterwards. These precautions should enable them to avoid contracting toxoplasmosis, a minor disease in adults that can cause major problems in unborn babies. A doctor can tip a woman off to these issues, and many others.

Finally, a pre-pregnancy exam can enable couples at risk for chromosomal or genetic disorders -- older parents or those with family histories of such defects -- to learn about the nature of their risk, and the option of genetic testing.

Albert and Eleanor Nelson called on his Aunt Jo and Uncle Roland McAllister in South Paris on Wednesday. Jo is at home after being in the hospital for a while. She is doing nicely. We had two power outages recently which messed up the traveling through Stoneham and North Lovell. The first one was a huge tree which fell over in the dooryard of John and Betty Woodbury's and brought power lines down with it. People coming home from work had to go around the Kezars. The second tree fell on the grounds of Bill and Connie Whittemore of North Lovell. This big tree had fallen over across the road and taken some wires down and traffic was held up for quite some time. Some traffic was rerouted through Slab City road.

While at the hardware store this week, she told me of seeing a humming bird's nest by her home. She described it as being real small and cone shaped. Perhaps I will get to see it next time and can describe it more fully. I must go now and make some food for my own little visitors.

Bobbie-Ann Abbott and husband Fred, and Sarah Halloway and husband William, all from Illinois visited Ralph and Harriett Brown for a week's vacation. Bobbie-Ann is daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Ralph Brown and Sarah is their granddaughter.

Darlene and Gregg Dunn celebrated their wedding anniversary at the home of Wayne and Cathy Andrews in Bartlett, NH. Loreta Andrews and Crystal and Nicky Dunn helped them celebrate. There were about 12 members of family and friends at the party on July 29. A mouse was seen in town on Tuesday afternoon in the field by Dwight Grover's house. A small bear was seen by Troy Nelson up by Under's house on Wednesday morning. I guess you have to be in the right spot at the right time to see these animals. The state has been putting new tar on one half of the main road through here. It sure looks and rides better. We were so sorry to learn of the death of Gladys Kilgore at the Norway Convalescent Center. She was the oldest member of the town of Stoneham and the Daughters of Union Veterans of the Civil War, Hannah F. Richardson Tent 19, and the East Stoneham Congregational Church. She was correspondent for the Bethel Citizen for many years. Much sympathy is extended to her family and close friends. The Daughters of Veterans held special memorial services which she had requested.

Albert Nelson Jr., Troy and Eric hosted a gathering at the Nelson's camp at Wilsons Mills over the weekend with 14 people there. It was reported that they had a good time, even if it did rain. Everett Andrews and several others from this area attended the car races at Loudon, NH last weekend. They all had a good time. Jr. Vail is having a new roof put on his house. Brenda Files is having her house painted.

The Smith's are doing lots of repair work at their home, the former Helen Grover house. Five members of the planning board met at the town office Tuesday evening to discuss and approve some applications which had been submitted.

South Woodstock

The Andy Valley Central All Stars have been playing a lot of good baseball lately. They have three local players that made the all-star team. They are Paul Cox, Kaleb Dugan and Joshua Appleby. The team won the State Championship in their division and will be playing a Rhode Island team at the Field of Dreams in Harrison soon. We wish them a lot of luck. Against my wishes, I had another birthday this past week. We had a small family get together at my daughter's in South Paris. We had strawberry shortcake for dessert. My sister-in-law Tommy Poland stopped by and brought me some presents. Cleo Ryerson called and wished me a happy birthday. My sisters, Dote Crisler and Evelyn Dunn both called to remind me how old I'm getting. Beverly Steams and I went out to lunch at the new Country Way Restaurant on Monday. I'd just as soon forget the whole birthday thing. Margaret Stevens and a few others had sales at the Union Church for three days last weekend.

Larry Billings, curator of the Woodstock Historical Society, gave a large mirror to the society. Mr. Billings has gotten some good biographies to read from Basil Sequin's bookstore recently. The historical society is always looking for something interesting to share with people about the past. Anella Burnham and Evelyn Bean watched the museum recently. Attendance was good. The Billings family went to Founder's Day on Paris Hill. There were many things on display despite the windy weather. President Mary Billings put fresh flowers in the museum recently. Patty Thurlow has traded cars recently. She's sporting a nice looking blue car. Looks really nice. Joe Pete and Laurene Appleby stopped by one night this week. They have been busy going to ball games to watch their grandson, Joshua Appleby, and hadn't been down in quite a while. On a couple of my trips to Lewiston this week, I saw Leon Poland working on the road in Auburn. He was putting in a culvert. Quote of the week: "I've learned that if at first you don't succeed, try, try a couple of times more. The quit. There's no sense in making a fool of yourself."

Oh, I am complaining this time. Visitors at the Traveling Post are fed up with this summer rain. We are looking forward to a hot Aug. right? The black bears are out and hungry, so keep an eye on your garbage. Matthew finally got to go fishing with daddy last week. He caught a couple small mouth and a perch. Welcome to our friends Trisha Hanson, Sheldon Cohen and their son Zachary who are visiting Upton. They are hoping to see a moose and check out the other critters of the lake area. The Ladies Aid reports that they had a successful day at the Craft Yard Sale. Well, I putted "Tone-deaf" driving a red Mazda pickup in the Upton Gravel area. You were there to come forward, thank!

Friday night, July 21, 1995, there were over 100 people at the old Colville Stone barn as a saddle.

North Woodstock

by Shañe Billings

This week Bridget Billings and Jenn Shaw went to the movies in Bethel. They saw "Phenomenon," and Bridget says it was very good.

This summer I have been working as a resident care aide at Chapel Valley Boarding Home in West Paris. A couple of months ago, two cats came to live at the home. One of them is black and goes by the name of Smokey; the other one, Patchies, is white with brown spots. The 15 residents love having the cats to keep them company, and the staff enjoys them as well. However, the two kitties love to play rough with one another and get under foot, especially when I am working! Overall, I have had a great time at the boarding home. It is certainly one of the more interesting and enjoyable summer jobs I can think of.

Today I went to West Bethel and spent the afternoon with Sarah Stowell. We had a great time visiting and listening to CDs.

The fierce rain and wind have caused the power to go out a couple of times this week. If you have managed to escape this annoyance, consider yourself very lucky.

Lisa Haines came to North Woodstock this week to visit with me, as well as with Herschel and Betty Abbott.

That's all the news from North Woodstock this week.

Pastor Robert Rainville was given a surprise party at the Praise Assembly of God Church on Friday, in honor of his 40th birthday. His wife Denise planned the party and did a take off on "This is Your Life" by showing pictures and explaining how their lives paralleled growing up and then highlighting their lives together. Owen and Debbie Brown presented him a sponge cake, made out of sponges. Denise and Andrea Rainville did a skit on how Sunday mornings might go now that he has turned forty. Roger interrupted his hike along the Appalachian Trail to attend.

Ralph Mills was expected to spend the weekend at his home here. He wanted to patch the roof on his camp if it will stop raining.

I received a nice letter from Amy Hanscom a while ago, thanking me for a little gift I had given to her for her birthday. She said she had a lot of visitors that week. Rodney and Kathy, and Nancy Anderson had been there earlier. Ruth Cummings also came, so did Charlotte Cole and her cousin, who was her brother-in-law for years. Charlotte played her guitar and sang for the group. Vada showed up Sunday. It was a happy birthday all right! Roger was also there to enjoy. His birthday is coming on Aug. 14. More visitors and more cards. See you there.

Newry Community Church services were held on Sunday with Pastor Rodney Hanscom at the pulpit and daughter Nancy at the organ. The message of the day was: "Like a daisy" from St. Matthew 6:28 "And why take ye thought for raiment? Consider the lilies of the field, how they grow, they till not neither do they spin." The church welcomed Nancy's friend Janell from Natural Bridge, NY. Also a welcome to Gary and Kathelyn Maneboth, Pat, Aaron and Hamel who are spending time at Umbagog Lake.

Karlene Bachelder, Betsy Clark, Gil Seeley, Eleanor Davis, Louise Tetley, Irene Hadfield, Doris Parent and Sylvia Wight of the Newry Bowling Gang were at the Oxford Lanes one day last week. Rena Powers and daughter Christine were guests. On the overall scores, Gil was high on the singles beating Doris by only one pin. She was also high on the triples beating Doris by three pins. Gil had one spare and one strike. Karlene had two spares, Betsy and Eleanor each had one spare and Doris had two.

Sterling and Eileen Thompson and wives from Somerside Prince Edward Island were guests of Bill and Sylvia Wight over the weekend. They were here in Maine to attend

Howdy friends! This is quite a nice Tuesday morning here on High Street, but the weather report doesn't sound like it is likely to continue.

Marcia Baxter from Oxford has been on vacation and visited Mary Lovejoy one day last week.

Clarence Faulkner, from Hebron, called on the Lovejoy family twice last week.

Oxford Pomona Grange will be hosted by West Paris Grange on Aug. 6. Guests are to bring the refreshments. A salad and cold cuts supper is planned.

You all come to the Down Home Country Show at Franklin Grange Hall in Bryant Pond, at 7 p.m. on Aug. 9. This promises to be a super good show with lots of local entertainers taking part. Refreshments will be on sale. Admission will be $4 for adults and $2 for those under 12. Come and plan for a full evening of entertainment. You may need a pillow to cushion the butt!

Monday night we attended the supper and meeting at Franklin Grange Hall in Bryant Pond. This was Ladies' Night and we had to get a lady to fill our office. We also had to provide them with a gift. Audrey Hadley, from West Paris Grange filled my office as assistant steward and did a good job.

Wednesday afternoon we got a call from Ron Heath, that Peggy's car was ready to go again, so we went and brought it home. So far the transmission seems to shift as it should. We just hope that it will continue.

Wednesday evening we picked up Doc Merrill and visited Bill and

by Colista Morgan

The road of life winds on, we know not where and memory is the only way that leads us back to youth. Childhood memories come and go and some always stay. There is one I think of so many times and have asked about many times, but have received no answer. When was the pass that went under the railroad to Beacon Hill closed as a road? More than fifty years ago the road was truly rustic and I can recall its location near the Tubbs District and other things about it. I remember going through the pass with my dad one morning with a horse and wagon as he went to work, and after leaving him I drove the horse back home. The road wound its way where fitting shadows frolicked under green arched trees. I clearly recall the underpass and Beacon Hill even today.

The road from the Tubbs District to Greenwood City, over which cars travel today, was built in 1921 or 1922, under the supervision of George Cole. As I talked with one of the boys who worked there, he told me of how the land was so steep at Dug Out Hill, they first had to make heel marks to hold themselves in place before starting work. When the pass was made through so that a car could go, Roland Hayes drove his 1921 Model T through to fulfill the request of George Cole who had said, "I want to be the first to ride over the new road!"

I would not make an estimate of how many pass over it today. I still know today where the underpass was, but often wonder when it was closed to travel. Is there anyone living today who remembers, or is it on a recent record in town?

I have had many callers this week. All brought interesting messages. I was glad to return to church this week.

Dot Betts drove to New Hampshire to attend her daughter's 25th Wedding Anniversary last weekend. So far, it has been a hard season to get hay. Rain and rain again.

It was nice to see Mabel Nichols of Georgia again. She and her granddaughter are visiting relatives for a few days.

I surely live in one of the best places in the world, for I have had rolls, birthday cake (not mine), green beans and one night for supper, baked, stuffed haddock left here for me. Thank you, nice neighbors and friends. I enjoyed my cards too.

It's the next best thing to winning the lottery!

AUGUST ALMANACK QUIZ

By NATALIE TIMBERLAKE

We are in the midst of "dog days," the subject of one of the July questions. But one of the most pleasant indications that we face as we hope dog days dwindle, is Lammas day, according to the Pocket Almanack of 1796. On with the August quiz and then my own responses to the July questions.

Quiz:

1. What is Lammas Day, celebrated Aug. 1, 1796?
2. What day can a non-mathematician tell the time of day?
3. Where would we find the Circuit Court sitting on the 23rd?
4. What was to happen at Dartmouth College on the 25th?
5. Why was King Philip implacable?
6. Where is Mt. Hope (where King Philip was killed)?
7. Why was his head brought back to Plymouth?
8. What was the relationship between Massasoit and Philip?
9. What familiar group of the past few months seems to be having some vacation time?

My responses to the July Quiz, which means you may have better ones:

1. One or more things in common about July 4 today, and 200 years ago. It would be a day both we and they could celebrate national independence.

2. Cambridge commencement, Harvard College.

3. Naming "dog days." The period of time when Sirius, the brightest star of the Manis Major (big dog) group rise near the same time as the sun. Sometimes people say that these sultry, humid, clammy, foggy days are not fit for a dog. Dogs do need special consideration during this season. Today the star dates are not observed so exactly, and the time from July 3 to Aug. 11 is now called "dog days."

4. Where did the verse originate? I couldn't find out for sure, did you? It was probably by someone well-known, if not too poetic, and by the quotation marks, seems to have been published before. I called the reference desk at the Maine State Library for help, without any real luck. My own suggestion was Philip Freneau, one of the few working poets of the time, and known both as an "anglophobe" and "poet of the American Revolution." He also liked poems to rhyme, and to be popular. Your ideas are welcomed. Then there was Ben Franklin, somewhat of a rhyming almanack himself.

5. Date to question: Bastille Day. My dictionary says July 14, 1789. Since they lived nearer the time of the event, I hate to object.

6. Political event: the first president to be elected after George Washington whose election was generally popular. Although "parties" were not formed, there were conservatives like Jefferson who defended local (decentralized) government while Hamilton was definitely an advocate of strong central government.

7. Aug. 11 would have been the tenth Sunday after Trinity, 1796.

8. "Hallowell" seemed like the odd Maine site for the SJC to convene. However, Augusta, now the state town of Kennebec County, didn't incorporate as such until 1849, after separating from Hallowell.

9. Sunday is designated by "B" because the Sunday Letter appears to have changed officially in March with the arrival of the vernal equinox which once was regarded as the beginning of the new year. For 1996, the Sunday Letter is GF. Calls to several persons and associations still leave me asking more questions.

Before our next quiz, we will have had our Bicentennial Pageant, and I hope to see all of you in the audience.

The monthly Almanack Quiz, a Bethel biennial feature, is based on the Pocket Almanack of 1796, found in the collection of Rev. Daniel Gould. Quizzes are developed by Natalie Timberlake, 824-2234, FAX 824-3353.

Review:

Summer music in Lovell

By JOHN CARTER

It's a long way to Lovell -- or is it? The combination of excellent music, no admission charge (donations accepted), and the famous acoustics of the Brick Church in the village add up to an evening well spent in Lovell. Dan Moore opened the Thursday evening's program with a warm and sensitive rendition of Mozart's "Sonata in B Flat." Moore's dynamics were well done and his musical shading was thoroughly enjoyable. When he finished, my first thought was "Isn't there more?"

Bob Carabia joined Moore for "Three Fantasy Pieces" by Robert Schumann. Producing a smooth and complete tone on his clarinet, Carabia's lead work invited the audience to just sit back and enjoy the music. I am sure that all the thoughts were pleasant ones. It was thoroughly enjoyable.

Moving through a little musical post, the Saint-Saens "Le Cou Cou" which Carabia delivered with appropriate mime, the first half of the concert ended with a smooth and sleek rendering of two of George Gershwin's "Preludes." Carabia's clarinet work on these two was the sort that has inspired legions of young people to sign up for clarinet lessons.

Billed as a "Potpourri of 20th Century American Music," the second half of the concert began with Moore's rendition of the "Charleston Rag," written by Eubie Blake. The focus shifted to the clarinet next as Carabia played Sidney Bechet's "Le Petit Fleur." This piece, written for the soprano saxophone was rendered by the clarinet with rounder and gentler tones. The sound of the soprano sax playing this piece is a tighter, more stretched sound; hearing it on the clarinet added a new dimension to this piece.

"Skylark" by Hoge Carmichael and "On the Sunny Side of the Street," played with feeling and undeniable rhythm, overcame any remaining audience resistance and everyone moved to the music in some way. A turn of the century circus arrangement of "The Walking Frog Rag" was then masterfully rendered by the duo conjuring up clown images and smells of wet sawdust. Moore's piano playing was in high gear.

The romantics in the audience were next treated to a trio of warm and feeling pieces: "The Wave," "There Will Never Be Another You," and "Emily." I saw a few ladies move a little closer to their escorts and more than one hand got squeezed. The closing number, "J.D.'s Boogie Woogie," long a feature of the Jimmy Dorsey Band, showcased Moore's walkin' left hand. Referring to it as one of Don Tripp's favorites, Moore renamed it for the evening as Don Tripp's Boogie, honoring one of the founders of the Summer Music Series who passed away in May. If you did not know that a Kwai Concert Grand could boogie, you should have seen this one as Moore urged more music out of it.

The audience was treated to an encore jam session performance of "When the Saints Go Marching In," where Moore was joined at the keyboard by the retired headmaster of Bridgton Academy.

If you don't take the kids or a friend and go and hear them next time they play, shame on you. There must have been room for another 15 or 20 people to sit, and lots of standing room. The musical performances so far this year have given us every reason to make July and Aug. Thursday evenings "Brick Church Summer Music Series" evenings.

LEARNING FROM A CHAMP
Rebecca Fletcher, the captain of the Dirigo High School Class C girls championship basketball team, was the instructor for a basketball clinic held recently at Crescent Park Elementary School. Thirty-five area girls in grades 1-8 took part in the four-day program, organized by Dan Hart, Jolene Shimamura and Bernice Caddigan. Here, Fletcher puts some of the younger girls through a lateral motion drill.

HEALTHY LIVING

More Women Aware of Sun's Dangers to Skin

(NU) - The message that the sun is not as benevolent as it feels and can be harmful is coming across loud and clear to American women, according to an independent survey commissioned by Physicians Formula Cosmetics.

Four out of five surveyed acknowledged concern over sun exposure, and nearly all said protection from the sun is the most important factor influencing their skin care product purchases.

With good reason. In the United States, one in every three cancers diagnosed this year will be skin cancer. Chronic overexposure to sunlight is the cause of 95 percent of all skin cancers.

Here are some other things to know about sun exposure and skin cancer, regardless of the season:

- Damage occurs with each unprotected exposure and accumulates over a lifetime.
- Clouds block only 20 percent of harmful radiation.
- Sitting in the shade doesn't guarantee protection from sunburn.
- Manufacturers are well aware of women's growing concern over sun exposure and now offer a variety of protective products.

FOOT NOTES

Views About Podiatry Vary Nationwide

(NU) - Do you know what podiatric medicine is? Would you go to a podiatrist for treatment of foot pain? Your answers may depend on where you live.

"Attitudes Toward Foot Care," a survey of 1,000 Americans conducted for the American Podiatric Medical Association, found that geography plays a part in attitudes toward foot care and podiatric medicine.

Once a medical problem of the foot arises, Northerners are the most likely to visit a podiatric physician. Twenty-two percent of the survey respondents in the Northeast said they visited a podiatrist for heel pain, while only 5 percent of Southerners and 4 percent of Westerners went for the same reason.

Similarly, Northeasterners were more than twice as likely to see a podiatric physician about athlete's foot, general foot pain, and thickened or deformed toenails than their counterparts in the South or West.

Wherever you live, the APMA says foot pain should not be ignored because it could signal other serious medical problems. Deformed, thickened or discolored toenails could signal iron deficiency, psoriasis or impending heart failure. Heel pain also is a signal to seek medical attention because of the many afflictions that contribute to it, such as heel spurs, arthritis or bursitis.

For more information about preventing foot pain or podiatric medicine in general, call the APMA at (800) FOOTCARE.

Get a Healthy Portion of Mixed Veggies

(NU) Studies show that phytonutrients, compounds found in vegetables that provide them with the natural protection against disease and sun damage, may decrease the risk of specific illnesses in humans, including heart disease and some cancers, including prostate cancer.

- So how do you get all the vegetables you need for good health?
- When you have the munchies, reach for raw vegetables instead of chips.
- Quench your thirst with tomato or vegetable juice instead of soda.
- Include salad in your noontime and evening meals.

DENTAL HEALTH QUIZ

How Much Do You Know About Your Teeth?

(NU) - Here's a question for you:

After the common cold, what's considered the most widespread infectious disease in the United States? If you said dental disease, go right to the head of the class.

A whopping 96 percent of Americans have at least one cavity. And three out of four people suffer from gingivitis or other forms of gum disease. The numbers add up to fear—expressed by many baby boomers—that they might lose their pearly whites long before their golden years.

But there is something to smile about: Experts at the major dental organizations—including the American Dental Association, the American Academy of Periodontology and the American Academy of Pediatric Dentistry—agree that better care of our teeth and gums can dramatically reduce our chances of dental problems.

Take this quick quiz from Tom's of Maine for a brush-up on how to boost your dental health.

The Questions:

(Answer True or False)

1. There's a 60-second station break before your favorite TV program begins. That's just enough time to properly brush your teeth.
2. Kissing is a way you could give your partner gum disease.
3. You can't turn back the clock on gum disease: Once it starts, it can only get worse.

Multiple Choice:

(Choose all that apply)

4. A thorough teeth-cleaning regimen should include:
 - a. brushing on all sides.
 - b. brushing at the gum line.
 - c. hard scrubbing to polish teeth.

How much time should you spend brushing?

- a. brushing the tongue
- b. flossing
5. When you see the ADA "Seal of Acceptance" on a toothpaste, you know that the toothpaste:
 - a. has been found to be safe.
 - b. has been found to be effective.
 - c. lives up to its advertising claims.
 - d. is free of artificial sweeteners, colors, preservatives and dyes.
6. Your toothbrush and floss are miles away. You can still help yourself triumph over tooth decay by:
 - a. chewing sugarless gum.
 - b. drinking a glass of water.
 - c. eating cheddar cheese.
 - d. eating an apple.
 - e. none of the above.

The Answers:

1. True or False — 1. False. Studies find that while most people spend a minute or so brushing, you really need about twice as much time to effectively clean teeth and gums.
2. True. Experts say that with extensive contact, the bacteria associated with gum disease can be passed from mouth to mouth—as in kissing.

ing. Keep on kissing, but to make sure gum disease doesn't get between you, see your dentist for regular checkups.

3. False. According to the American Academy of Periodontology, the first stage of gum disease (gingivitis) is reversible. Among the symptoms—gums that become red, swollen or bleed easily, and persistent bad breath. Professional dental care, plus regular brushing and flossing, can reverse gingivitis and reduce your risk for more serious gum problems.

Multiple Choice

4. Choose A, B, D and E. The American Dental Association says you should brush twice a day and floss daily to fight plaque. Brush with gentle strokes, because hard scrubbing can harm teeth and gums. And brush the tongue—it helps freshen breath.
5. It's A, B and C. The ADA "Seal of Acceptance" is your assurance that a toothpaste lives up to its promises, is not too abrasive and has adequate fluoride to fight tooth decay. Currently, the only ADA-accepted toothpaste free of artificial sweeteners, colors, preservatives and dyes is made by Tom's of Maine.
6. Reach for A or C. After a meal, try eating a slice of aged cheese, such as cheddar or Monterey Jack, or chew sugarless gum for 15 to 20 minutes. Both have been found to reduce the effects of the acid attack that leads to tooth decay.

For the complete version of this quiz, and for more information about natural oral care products, write Tom's of Maine, Consumer Dialogue Department, P.O. Box 710, Kennebunk, ME 04043, or call (800) 775-2388 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 3 p.m. Eastern time.

Better Digestive Health: Simple Steps Can Help

One good way to improve digestion: eat more servings of fruit, vegetables and grains.

(NU) - An estimated 50 million Americans will experience some form of irregularity this year, ranging from delays in a normal bowel movement to more significant complications.

The causes of constipation and treatments are varied, but there are some simple steps to help prevent irregularity and relieve constipation. Richard Paul, M.D., of Schering-Plough HealthCare Products suggests the following:

- Drink plenty of water. Eight glasses of water a day will help keep the stool soft and easier to pass, and help prevent irregularity. Water also aids digestion and helps lubricate the gastrointestinal tract.
 - Eat more fruit, vegetables and grains. These foods contain bulk and soluble fiber that help pass waste more rapidly through the body. Good sources of fiber include breads, whole-grain cereals, fresh fruit and vegetables. To prevent bleeding, increase fiber intake gradually.
 - Exercise. Activity helps speed up the body's metabolism. Combined with lots of water and a proper high-fiber diet, exercise helps maintain regularity.
 - Reduce tension. Constipation often results from stress. Tension actually constricts muscles and can affect bodily functions. Exercise and tension-relieving techniques—a short walk or a few moments of relaxation—can help.
 - Use a laxative to relieve constipation. If all else fails, short-term use of a mild laxative may be helpful. But, as with any drug, read and follow directions carefully. If no improvement occurs, consult your physician.
- For instance, Correctol Herbal Leaf laxative, a gentle new stimulant laxative made with senna, a natural active ingredient, can be proved to drink before bedtime to promote dependable overnight relief.

Insect Stings Can Be Life-Threatening

(NU) - To encourage a safe summer for everyone, the American College of Allergy and Immunology recommends the following: Allergists—Consult an allergist regarding evaluation for preventive treatment. Adrenaline—Always carry self-injectable epinephrine. Avoidance—practice insect avoidance. For a free information brochure on allergic reactions to insect stings, call 1-800-23-STING (NewsUSA).

Tips to Keep You Going Despite an Aching Back

News USA

(NU) - What do you do when you injure your back? Do you stop all activity? Or do you continue with your daily life as if nothing happened?

"Most cases of acute low back pain will get better with short-term rest followed by a slow return to your usual activities. Pain lasting longer than six weeks or sciatic type pain should be evaluated by a spine-care physician," says Dr. Robert Gruber at the Florida Spine Institute.

"While it's important to rest following an injury," the institute's physical therapists say, "it's also necessary to participate in some form of physical activity." The key is to find a balance between the appropriate levels of activity and rest.

Here are some tips for going about your daily life while recovering from a back injury.

- Get into bed by sitting on the edge of the bed first. Then lower your upper body sideways, using your arm for support. Lift your feet and legs onto the bed at the same time.
- Reverse the process when you get up, moving as close to the edge of the bed as possible before putting your feet on the floor.
- Sleep in positions that promote healing. If you sleep on your back, use a pillow that keeps your head in a balanced position and place a small pillow under your knees.

If you prefer sleeping on your side, keep your lowermost leg nearly straight and bend your top leg. A pillow between your legs will make you more comfortable.

When sleeping on your stomach, try doing without your pillow. Putting it under your feet instead of your head may increase your comfort.

• A grab bar will make it easier to get in and out of the shower. And a rack between waist and shoulder height will make your soap, shampoo and other personal articles easier to reach.

• Put one hand on the counter and bend at the hips when you brush your teeth. Elevate one foot and keep your head up and in a balanced position. If you can't resist the urge to bend forward, try brushing your teeth while kneeling. Use the counter for support when you're ready to stand up.

• Don't bend over to put on stockings, socks or slacks. Instead, keep your back flat on your bed and pull your clothing on as far as you can. Then roll onto your side and stand up to finish dressing.

The Florida Spine Institute, located in Clearwater, is the nation's largest spine care center. For information on inpatient and outpatient services for people with back problems, call 1-800-477-7746.

FROM THE

Bethel Lions Club

To all the individuals and organizations that braved the elements and participated in the Mollycoddett Day parade and activities, the Bethel Lions Club would like to acknowledge and thank the following: Bethel Rescue, the fire departments from Bethel, Greenwood, Gilead and Newry, D&E Sanitation, Mahosue Music Makers, Bridgette's School of Dance, Roger Tinkelle, Those Guys, Bethel Area Chamber of Commerce, Bethel Rotary Club, Jackson-Silver Post #68, VFW Post #11363, the Boy and Girl Scouts and Brownies, the fiddler contestants, Hart's Stitch & Sew, and the Bethel Inn and Sunday River Skiway for sponsoring the wonderful fireworks display.

Our congratulations to the 1996 Princess Mollycoddett, Kelly Szente, and to the parade float winners: first place, "Bethel or Bust," from Bailey's Auto Body; second, The Bethel Bicentennial Committee float; and third, the Bethel Area Chamber of Commerce float. Honorable mention went to the Birthday Cake float, from the Pleasant Valley Bible Church.

CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH BICENTENNIAL

The West Parish Congregational Church of Bethel, the oldest continuing institution in the Town of Bethel, after the town itself, is celebrating its Bicentennial. The West Parish formed on Sept. 8, 1796 and became the first church society to organize in Bethel. Rev. Daniel Gould became its first minister and the first to settle in Bethel.

The West Parish commenced its year long celebration in Sept. 1995 with a Visioning Retreat. Events of celebration have been held throughout this past year and will continue along with Bethel's celebration.

On Thursday, Aug. 1, the West Parish hosts the Bethel Historical Society's monthly meeting with the address being given by Margaret Joy Tibbets who will speak on the history of the West Parish Congregational Church.

On Aug. 18, the Sunday Service will be held in the clearing near the first church site, located on the Androscoggin River near the present bridge.

The Bicentennial weekend will be Sept. 6-8 with an open house, exhibits, tour of church sites, pageants, dedication of the Memorial Garden and a Service of Celebration and Rededication on Sunday.

The church has recently published a 42 page history of the West Parish Congregational Church 1796-1996, which is on sale at the church.

Tips from the Canoeing Tips:
Avoid canoeing when the wind is blowing hard enough to produce white caps on the water and to bend small trees on the shore.
When canoeing alone sit in bow (front) seat and face the stern (rear). This places you nearer the center of the canoe for better control and less lift of opposite end.
If the wind is strong, kneel in middle or paddle with 90 percent of canoe behind you.
Head into waves, including wake from motor boats, rather than take them broadside.
Don't paddle with arms and shoulders only. Move your upper torso forward and back to utilize many more muscles.

Tibbetts to head BHS fund drive

Bethel Historical Society President Charles Raymond has announced that former Board Chairman Margaret Joy Tibbetts will head the 1996 Annual Fund Campaign, succeeding Howard W. Cole, who retired last year after heading the effort for the past thirteen years.

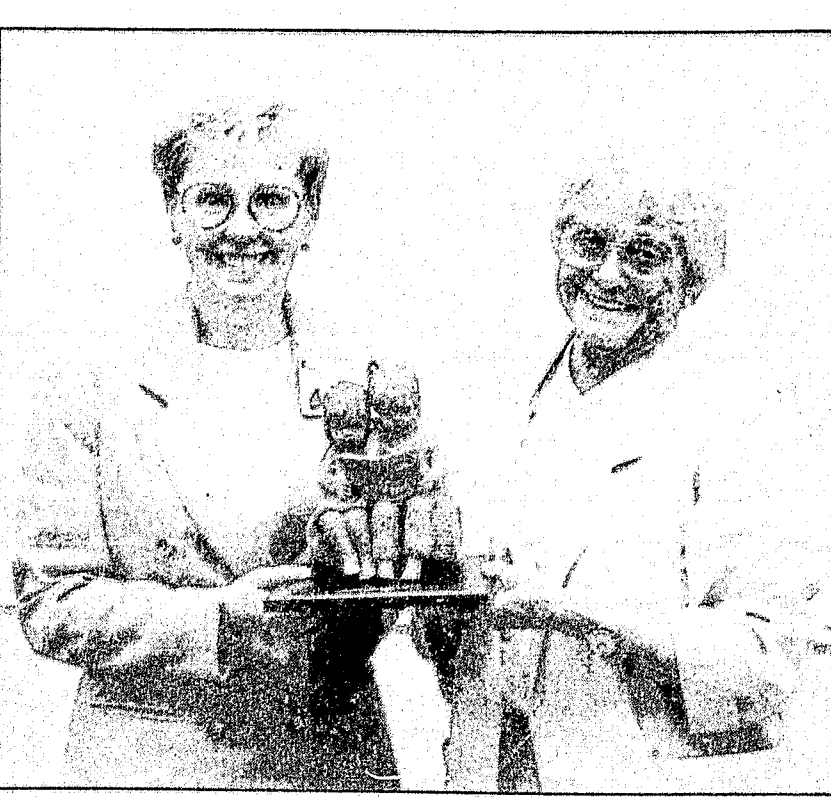

"We are delighted that Margaret Tibbetts will head our annual fund drive this year," Raymond said. "It is very important to the society and we know with her leadership it will continue to be successful."

Currently celebrating the 13th anniversary of its founding, the society has been actively preserving and interpreting the local and regional past for a wide audience. Now more than a thousand members strong in nearly fifty states and several Canadian provinces, it provides a wide variety of activities including school programs, monthly meetings, special events, heritage festivals, conferences, exhibits, workshops and publications. Its achievements have been recognized by a number of organizations including the American Association of State and Local History. The society operates a period house museum and a research facility at its Broad Street headquarters, the Dr. Moses Mason House.

This year also marked the appearance of the Society's latest publication, "The Richardson Lakes: Jewels in the Rangeley Chain" by Herbert Shirreffs. This has been extremely well received and was very favorably reviewed by the Maine Sunday Telegram.

Anyone wishing to make a tax deductible contribution in any amount is urged to send it to the society at PO Box 12, Bethel, ME 04217. Donations may be made in honor of or in memory of an individual or a couple. Those wishing further information, should call the office at 207-824-2908.

BETHEL EDUCATOR HONORED--Career educator Natalie Timberlake of Bethel receives the 1996 Reading Recovery Service award from Paula Moore, assistant professor of education and director of the University of Maine Center for Early Literacy. Timberlake was recognized for her outstanding work as coordinator of the Bethel Reading Recovery Teacher Training site and for her leadership and continuing support of the early intervention program that helps low-achieving first graders become independent readers. The award was presented at a recent conference sponsored at the University of Maine by the State Department of Education for Reading Recovery, K-2 classroom and special education teachers. Timberlake, who earned her bachelor's, masters and certificate of advanced studies at UMaine, began her teaching career in Bethel in 1961 as a substitute, and over the years was a teacher and administrator in special education and reading programs. She retired in 1993, but agreed to serve again as Reading Recovery site coordinator in 1995-96. Among past recipients of the service award are former Gov. John McKernan, former State Education Commissioner Leo Martin, and UMaine College of Education Dean Robert Cobb.

MAHOOSOC ARTS NOTES

The Mahoosuc Arts Council is looking for a new design for the Ninth Annual Hike/Bike/Run T-shirt.

The council would like to invite interested artists to collaborate with the council by submitting designs to the Mahoosuc Arts office by Aug. 31.

This event is an annual fundraiser for Mahoosuc Arts and will take place on Saturday, October 21 at Sunday River Ski Resort.

The council is interested in a design that incorporates the many aspects of the arts, as well as the hike, bike and run components. The creator of the chosen design will receive two complimentary shirts and her/his signature will be printed on the shirts. The design does not have to be camera ready and can be screen printed with a four color process.

For more information, please call Vicki Rackliffe at the Mahoosuc Arts office, 824-3575. The office is located above the Admissions Office at Gould Academy.

In Memoriam

"In loving memory of my parents,
Wilfred Lord, Nov. 22, 1890 - July 28, 1966,
& Nancy Millet Lord,
Sept. 12, 1894 - August 1, 1992."

Near shady wall a rose once grew,
Budded and blossomed
in God's free light,
Watered and fed by morning dew,
Shedding its sweetness day and night.
As it grew and blossomed fair and tall,
Slowly rising to loftier height,
It came to a crevice in the wall,
Through which there shone a beam of light.
Onward it crept with added strength,
With never a thought of fear or pride
It followed the light through the crevice - length,
And unfolded itself on the other side.
The light, dew, the broadening view,
Were found the same
as they were before;
And it lost itself in beauties new,
Breathing its fragrance more and more,
Shall claim of death cause us to grieve,
And make our courage faint or fall?
Nay, let us faith and hope receive.
The rose still grows beyond the wall.
Scattering fragrance far and wide,
Just as it did in days of yore,
Just as it did on the other side,
Just as it will forever more.
Devoted Daughter, Hope

Bicentennial Bethel

Celebrating 200 years of unique history

BETHEL: A Historic Town

by STANLEY R. HOWE, Director
Bethel Historical Society

Bethel, a community of nearly 2,500, was founded in 1763 as Sudbury Canada, after the original grantee from Sudbury, Mass., who fought in the campaign to conquer Canada in 1690.

Sudbury, which began in 1774, was so named by the American Revolution that there were but 10 families in town at the time of "New England's Last Indian War" in 1781, which resulted in three of Sudbury's citizens being taken captive. One was soon released, but two others spent 13 months in a Quebec jail until peace was declared in 1763. Following the Revolution, settlement grew rapidly, and in 1796 the town was incorporated and given the name "Bethel," from the Book of Genesis, meaning "House of God."

The first town meeting was held at Middle Intervale in the barn of Francis Macdonald, father of Amos Hastings (1757-1830). It had been called by Benjamin Russell (1733-1802), Justice of the Peace, who was authorized to officially warn the inhabitants of the meeting by the legislation passed by the Massachusetts Legislature on June 10, 1796, setting up the town as the 107th in the District of Maine.

There was little water power potential at Middle Intervale, but at Bethel Hill a whole series of mills began to be built along Mill Brook. A grist mill, saw mill and later a tannery would be among the structures built here in the late 18th and early 19th centuries.

Dr. Moses Mason (1789-1866), a physician and businessman, became one of Bethel's most prominent citizens during the town's formative years in the first half of the 19th century, serving in many public offices, including two terms in Congress from 1833 to 1837. His home is the oldest surviving structure on Bethel Hill. Farming was the principal occupation of the earliest inhabitants who originally settled along the Androscoggin River on land cleared long ago by the Indians. A flood in 1785 drove them to higher ground. Although many of the marginal hillside farms were abandoned by the turn of the century and are now largely returned to forest, agriculture is still important today.

With the arrival of the Atlantic and St. Lawrence Railroad in 1851, connecting Bethel to Portland and later Montreal, manufacturing and tourism began to become major factors in the town's economy. The wood products industry grew rapidly after the Civil War and remains a significant factor in Bethel's economic life. The railroad's arrival meant that visitors to Bethel could travel conveniently from Boston and New York to enjoy the town's extraordinary natural setting and tour the nearby White Mountains. Farm families could easily send agricultural products to urban centers by rail and also welcomed city dwellers to enjoy life in the country as summer boarders. Their experience in Bethel is recalled in Ruth Crosby's book, "I Was A Summer Boarder." The town also has been a significant educational center due largely to the generosity of William Bingham II to Gould Academy, which was founded in 1836. Moreover, Bethel was the site of Dr. John Gehring's nationally famous clinic for treatment of persons with nervous disorders; later, the town became internationally known for the National Training Laboratory, which was established in 1947, and continues to hold seminars in human dynamics. As a result of this exposure, Bethel is one of the best-known small towns in the world for persons interested in the behavioral sciences.

Even a brief discussion of Bethel's history would be incomplete without mentioning William Rogers Chapman (1855-1935), impresario, conductor, organist, and composer, who founded and directed the Maine Music Festivals (1897-1926). For many years, he was director of the Rubenstein and Apollo Clubs of New York City. Like Dr. Gehring, but for different reasons, Chapman brought many to Bethel, including some of the nation's greatest musicians and performers. They came to visit him during summer vacations and to attend picnics given for the members of the Maine Music Festival at Chapman residences in the Mayville section of town (now the Norseman Inn) and on the Common at Bethel Hill (currently the Chapman Inn).

During the latter half of the 19th and well into the 20th century, numerous writers and artists visited Bethel and the surrounding area. Some of the most notable are writers Max Eastman and Kenneth Roberts, and artist David Johnson. Samuel W. Griggs, Harrison Bird Brown, Aaron Draper Shattuck, and John J. Enneking.

Prominent visitors to Bethel have certainly been coming to town since the 1860s when the construction of boarding houses and hotels made it possible to house them in some kind of comfort. Among the more famous visitors to Bethel through the years have been Jane Addams, Chief Justice Harlan Fiske Stone, Edward R. Murrow, Geraldine Farrar, and Paul Newman.

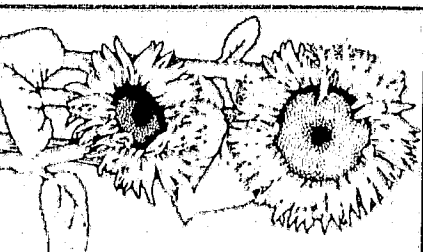

Much of the town's rich history is being celebrated during 1996 as Bethel observes the bicentenary of its incorporation. A wide variety of activities will take place during the entire year.
